New, Bigger HUB Emerging

What's warm, busy and shelters almost 50 nationalities on campus?

If you didn't guess it's HUB, welcome to the new, larger-than-ever version of the University's multi-nation home and marketplace.

Renovations and expansion in the past year have renewed the interiors of 119 HUB living units and added a sophisticated loading bay to the west of the building, for speedier handling of deliveries and garbage disposal.

By this time next year, work will be complete and HUB will have 425 units housing students from Canada, Hong Kong, Malaysia, the People's Republic of China, Singapore, Nigeria, Ghana, France, Germany and Britain, as well as an international array of shops, cafés and other small businesses.

Work on HUB's 112 Street ground level continues, expanding the building's capacity.

"We're adding more than 4,000 square metres of space here," said Al Rennie, Associate Vice-President (Finance), during a recent HUB inspection. "That's more than the total floor space of Assiniboia Hall." □

Feeling no pane: hydraulic platform gives a real lift to HUB cleanup.

Lamb's quarters: Moving gets personal, as Robert Lamb settles into his own new HUB unit.

Electrician Makes Smart Switch to Keep His Current Employer

As 1987 opened, University electrician Gary Hilsen could be allowed some optimism about his family's future. Since 1983 when their daughter Kelsey Dawn was born, he and his wife, Bernadette, had learned to adjust to life on one wage.

And by the time their son Keegan came along last year, they had made the move to a four-bedroom home in Ardrossan.

A heavy load for a one-salary family.

But Gary, born and raised in Edmonton, was at last feeling settled, making good money, holding down a secure University job, a job he liked, a job that he considered his career.

Then on Monday, 5 January, he was laid off for the first time in his life.

"I was very surprised," he says. Four other electricians had less seniority than he. But five had been cut, along with 30 clerical and technical staff.

His options were construction ("not exactly at its peak," he says), a painful relocation, or the added stress of working out of town, far from home, wife and children.

On the other hand, his most recent employer was the University. His contract entitled him to almost three months' layoff pay; he had the right to be recalled to the first available University job for which he was qualified; he was encouraged to attend free seminars on résumé preparation, and he had generous time off for interviews. If he wanted, the University would even pay for any courses he took to upgrade himself for re-entry to the job market.

He decided to switch to another line of work. Remembering how he'd been turned down once for a University building superintendent job, he applied to NAIT for the building operator's A licence and management and supervisory training he needed.

By April he had the licence, even if he was no closer to a new job.

Meanwhile, he went to interviews: up against 30, 50, on one occasion 150 other applicants. He felt dispirited. The layoff money was good, but that would run out. His lack of experience supervising others was working against him in interviews, he felt.

Then in June came the break, when he landed the job of building super for Chemical/Mineral and Mechanical Engineering, the same job he'd unsuccessfully applied for some two years earlier.

Gary Hilsen is realistic about the change of jobs. In the new position his shortage of qualifications dictates that he'll earn substantially less this year than last. His status and responsibilities on campus have changed. And this fall he'll be back at NAIT, taking a personnel supervision course.

But he considers himself very fortunate. "I think the University had a certain amount of compassion," he says. "In a lot of places it would be, see you around, it's been nice . . . Here, no one ever closed a door on me." □

Bilingual Business Program Makes Debut Next Month

Faculté Saint-Jean and Alberta Vocational Centre have combined on a new program called "Techniques d'administration du bureau."

The program, to be taught in both English and French at Alberta Vocational Centre, has been developed in response to a rising demand in Alberta for efficient bilingual office workers.

Those who enroll in the 10-month program (it starts on 14 September) can expect to become fluent in both official languages and efficient in today's office, be it traditional or automated.

The program should be of interest to any bilingual person wishing to qualify for a position in the field of office and information management.

The governments of Quebec and Alberta have funded the program.

Applications are still being accepted. The numbers to dial are 427-5512 (AVC) and 468-1582 (Faculté Saint-Jean). □

University Supports Regional Conference of American Association on Mental Deficiency

The American Association on Mental Deficiency (AAMD) is holding its Region IV Annual Conference in Edmonton (Westin Hotel) from 15 to 18 September.

The University of Alberta is a co-sponsor of the first AAMD Region IV conference to be held in Canada.

The scientific program is based on the theme "Working Toward Self-Sufficiency." Keynote speakers include Rathe Karrer, University of Illinois; Dennis Mithaug, University of Colorado; Jack Stark, University of Nebraska Medical Centre; Robert Bruininks, University of Minnesota Affiliated Program on Developmental Disabilities; and James Ellis, University of New Mexico School of Law.

Among the topics to be expanded on are: "Students leaving special education are failing. Why? What to do about it?"; "Enhancing community living and employment prospects for people with mental retardation" and "Constitutional issues concerning persons with disabilities."

General enquiries and/or registration requests should be directed to Steven Dennis at 454-9656. □

Correction

In Folio (13 August) CFRN-TV was incorrectly identified with the play "Blood Relations." The station concerned was CFCN-TV. We apologize for any inconvenience this may have caused. □

More Backs to Pat

The story on the award-winning Board of Governors' Annual Report, 1985-86, (Folio, 2 July) would not be complete without particular mention of two members of the Faculty of Arts.

It was Dick Harrison, Associate Dean (Humanities), and Assistant Dean Fred Radford, who researched and prepared for the editors the theme statement on the Humanities, that helped give the Report its special flavor and earn it prize-winning status. □

Medicine Gains Two Keen Minds

Two former medical students are sure to harbor fond memories of their alma mater.

Salman Qureshi and Louis Francescutti graduated in the spring and have gone on to a rotating internship program at the Edmonton General Hospital (Qureshi) and a surgical rotation at the University Hospitals (Francescutti).

Both men maintained high academic standards here. Mr. Qureshi won the Board of Governors Prize in Science in 1982 and proceeded to garner a total of 14 prizes in Medicine. He also received his BMSc degree "With Distinction" in 1985 and graduated this year "With Distinction and First Class Standing."

He received the Moshier Memorial Gold Medal and graduated at the top of his class. Mr. Qureshi hopes to specialize in internal medicine.

Mr. Francescutti is the recipient of the John W. Scott Honor Award for his academic achievement and his contribution to the Class of '87. Thanks in large part to his leadership, the Medical Students' Association has become involved in a number of worthwhile projects. These include the publishing of the Student Manual (the guidebook for students new to the Faculty of Medicine is now in its third edition) and the Poison Control Information Kit, which is almost ready for province-wide distribution. Mr. Francescutti obtained his PhD in Immunology in 1985. □

Hokkaido-Based Scientists Visit Their 'Twin' Campus

Metallurgist Seitaro Fukushima and soil and water engineer Fujio Tsuchiya are currently visiting the University from Hokkaido.

Dr. Fukushima's research is into ceramic sensors, like those found in automobile catalytic converters, and the recovery of vanadium, nickel and molybdenum from oil sands processing. For him, the past summer has been a return to familiar grounds. He took his baccalaureate degree here in the late Sixties. His leave from Hokkaido's Muroran Institute of Technology links him with Tom Etsell (Mining Metallurgy and Petroleum Engineering), also a specialist in ceramic sensors and metals recovery from flyash.

Dr. Tsuchiya teaches at Obihiro

University of Stockraising located close to Hokkaido's Pacific east coast. He's here to review work being done by Norbert Morgenstern and David Sego (Civil Engineering) on the mechanics of frost-heave in soils.

Both visiting professors are part of an Alberta-Asia exchange program funded through the Universities Coordinating Council, and administered by Alberta International (formerly the International Briefing Centre). □

Early Birds Invite You to Dew Your Best

Have your Wheaties early on 9 September because the University of Alberta Early Birds 6.49 and 3.25 km Walk Jog Run Open begins at 6:49 a.m.

The action starts and finishes in front of the Van Vliet Physical Education and Recreation Centre.

The short course is one lap around campus; the long course is a two-lap test.

The fee for all entrants is $6.49 (yes, Lotto 649 is a sponsor, along with Campus Fitness and Lifestyle, the University Bookstore, and Happy Pop), and the deadline for entries is noon, 8 September.

Entry forms are available in the Van Vliet Centre; race kits with entry number must be picked up by 4 p.m., 8 September, from the Campus Fitness and Lifestyle Office, W-90 Van Vliet Centre.

Refreshments will be served and prizes will be drawn for in the Faculty Lounge, Van Vliet Centre, immediately after the run.

Headbands and ribbons will be given to all entrants. □

Department of Culture, Boreal Institute for Northern Studies, Research Grant

In commemoration of the Fort Chipewyan Bicentennial in 1988, a total of $30,000 is available to fund research proposals dealing with the human history and occupation of the Fort Chipewyan region, which includes Fort Vermilion and other adjacent communities. This includes such disciplines as history, archaeology, linguistics, ethnography, material culture, child development, nutrition, demography, etc. Proposals must be at a publishable graduate level of scholarship.

Deadline for application is 1 October 1987.

Application forms are available from: Fort Chipewyan Region Research Project, Boreal Institute for Northern Studies, G213 Biological Sciences Building, University of Alberta, Edmonton, Alberta T6G 2E9.

Get Your Conference Folders at Materials Management

Materials Management is now filling orders for conference folders. The folders, previously ordered from the Office of Public Affairs, come under the central stocking number HF 440.

Ordering is by indent only.

For prices and other details, telephone Barry Lofto, 432-3275.

Faculty/Support Staff Tour Guides Needed

Would you be willing to help welcome parents of new students to the University of Alberta? on Saturday, 12 September, between 2 and 4 p.m., people familiar with the campus are needed to guide groups of parents and respond to questions.

If you are interested, call Karen May in the Development Office, 432-4418.

Reception for Joan Lazin

The Office of Administrative Systems (OAS) will hold a farewell reception for Joan Lazin on the occasion of her retirement, 31 August.

Joan Lazin joined OAS in January 1968. She was secretary to the first director, Bill McMinn, until 1974 when she transferred to the Academic Systems Group, programming Student Data Base applications for the Registrar's Office. With the advent of the Cumulative Academic Records System (CARS), she was largely responsible for the forms and transaction entry screens in that system. Most recently, she has been Office Systems Analyst with the Research and Planning group of OAS.

The reception will take place from 4 to 6 p.m. on 3 September. The venue is the Power Plant TV Lounge. Friends and colleagues are cordially invited to attend.

Contributions toward a farewell gift are most welcome. Telephone Alex Nagorski, 432-2257.

Activities

Chuji Hiruki (Plant Science) edited the book Tree Mycoplasma and Mycoplasma Diseases, a major contribution to understanding particular tree diseases, to be published later this year by the University of Alberta Press . . . The staff of Materials Management will be saying farewell to several of their fellow employees at a luncheon on 31 August. Retiring are Vera Remell, Dave Gray and Carmine Sdao (Scheduled Distribution), and Phil Watson, Art LeBrocq and Mike Matishak (Dispatch Distribution) . . . The Alberta Pork Congress has bestowed its 1987 Pork Industry Leadership Award on Frank Aherne (Animal Science) . . . English student Bradin Cormack's poem, "Horus Watches Over the Child Ramses", has won first prize in the 1987 Annual College Poetry Contest sponsored by the Lyric. His work, which was selected from among some 900 other poems, will be published in the fall edition of the Lyric, the oldest magazine in North America entirely devoted to the publication of traditional poetry . . . John King-Farlow (Philosophy) has appeared recently in Canadian Who's Who and has poems in Galley Sail Review and Edges . . . Medical Services Incorporated has awarded $28,000 to Einer Boberg, Paul Hagler and Lorne Yeudall (Speech Pathology and Audiology) for further research into central nervous system differences in stutterers.
